

Way-of-Working

This project was launched back-to-back to the DECIDE project. This means that we were already in the formed state as we saw now reason to alter the way we were working. Neither did we see any reason to change governance rules or the leadership structure. The same mechanics and modes of communication were kept on from the last project. We more or less immediately transitioned into the collaborating state as team members were starting to understand the problem, choose tasks and utilize the team to solve problems. Then we went into the performing state and were able to write the different components of the CI-server more or less independently. In this state the team was collaborating well, communicating over chat and the issue tracker in Github. We did not have to do any major backtracking. After merging the code together and testing the assessment repo we were able to reach the adjourned state which we will be in until we have met with the assistant for the project assessment.